Introduction

www.connectinlaterlife.eu (Laterlife) was developed by a transnational partnership funded by the European Union's Lifelong Learning Programme Grundtvig Measure established and currently operating on a not for profit basis. The objective of the Laterlife project is to increase the participation of older people in online activity and provide older people with the necessary resources and information for social and personal development.

A high level of social participation and engagement in later life has a significant positive impact on the lives of many retired people increasing self esteem, self worth, motivation and a sense of being involved in society. Lifelong learning has the potential to increase the intellectual and personal development of older people. To support this, the Laterlife online language learning laboratory enables older users to share and learn in a quick and easy way. In addition LaterLife provides users with information on services and events relevant to them. The www.connectinlaterlife.eu website and resource tools were developed to address the low rates of social participation of older people in the virtual world.
